active practice in the courts in 1884. In 1882 he was elected State Senator from Yolo and Solano Counties, and served in the twenty-fifth Legislative Assembly during the regular and extra sessions. This was the notable period in which efforts were made to oust the Railroad Commissioners by joint resolution of the two Houses of the Legislature. Mr. Kelley opposed the movement, and by reason thereof he was, with other members, read out by the Democratic party at the famous Stockton convention.

Mr. Kelley came to Willows in 1885, and purchased the Willows Journal, which he edited and conducted in connection with W. H. Kelley for two years. A close logician and a master of vigorous English, Mr. Kelley soon lifted this newspaper from obscurity into the most flattering prosperity. Since his coming to Willows he has always identified himself with the business and social advancement of that town. His energy, shrewdness, persistence and knowledge of men and motives, have always brought him to the front, a cheerful leader, particularly of any forlorn hope in which his town requires prudent generalship. In the struggles for the division of the county and for the formation of Glenn County, Mr. Kelley was acknowledged by the opponents of that measure to be their most skillful and most formidable adversary. In 1888 he was sent as a delegate to the Democratic State Convention at Los Angeles. Mr. Kelley was married, in 1876, to Miss Louisa, daughter of Daniel Zumwalt, a pioneer of California and an old resident of the county.

Death: Jul. 28, 1897

California, USA

HON. K. E. KELLEY.

Kirk Etna Kelley is a native of Warren County, "Illinois, born June 3, 1848. His father was one of the pioneers of California, coming to this State in 1848, shortly after the birth of Kirk E., and dying there some two years later. When but a child, his widowed mother, his brother and an adopted sister moved to Iowa, and here young Kirk was brought up on a farm. He attended school only three months and never entered the door of a high school or college except in the capacity of a teacher. What he acquired in an educational way was the result of his own self-teaching, of long hours in the evening, spent in reading, after a hard day's work. He was always an omnivorous reader of books, and his retentive memory gleaned and stored away the pith and substance of what he found therein, for effective use in after life. When he had reached his seventeenth year, young Kelley passed his examination and received his certificate of teacher. He then began teaching in the public schools and followed it for several years in Missouri and Kansas. In 1871 he came to California, and for two years taught school in Solano County. Being naturally ambitious to rise, Mr. Kelley began the study of the law. He had formed a partnership in the real-estate business at Dixon, and this afforded him an opportunity to devote his leisure time to his "black-letter books." He borrowed his books, and, by dint of hard study, was admitted to practice in the county court of Solano at the end of a year. At the close of the following year he was admitted to practice his profession before the District Courts of the Sixth and Seventh Judicial Districts. He was afterwards entitled to practice by admission before the Supreme Court of the State and Circuit Court of the United States. His large business was extensive and his fees were fat, and he was enabled to retire from

Shirley,

I came across one more record for Simeon Wilson born 1824. Below is a Civil War Enlistment Record, which originated in Leon, Decatur County, Iowa, which show Simeon Wilson enlisting in a Cavalry unit as a 'Farrier' [a person who knows how to 'shoe' horses]. The ages matches the age Simeon would be in 1861.

Thanks,

Jim Norman [Record Below]

Shirley,

Below is what I believe is the 1870 Census record for Simeon, and below that are the May 1st 1855 land purchase record for Simeon, and for what I believe are his 2 brothers Benjamin and Joseph. Let me know whether you consider these to be valid matches

Thanks,

HON. K. E. KELLEY.

Kirk Etna Kelley is a native of Warren County," Illinois, born June 3, 1848. His father was one of the pioneers of California, coming to this State in 1848, shortly after the birth of Kirk E., and dying there some two years later. When but a child, his widowed mother, his brother and an adopted sister moved to Iowa, and here young Kirk was brought up on a farm. He attended school only three months and never entered the door of a high school or college except in the capacity of a teacher. What he acquired in an educational way was the result of his own self-teaching, of long hours in the evening, spent in reading, after a hard day's work. He was always an omnivorous reader of books, and his retentive memory gleaned and stored away the pith and substance of what he found therein, for effective use in after life. When he had reached his seventeenth year, young Kelley passed his examination and received his certificate of teacher. He then began teaching in the public schools and followed it for several years in Missouri and Kansas. In 1871 he came to California, and for two years taught school in Solano County. Being naturally ambitious to rise, Mr. Kelley began the study of the law. He had formed a partnership in the real-estate business at Dixon, and this afforded him an opportunity to devote his leisure time to his "black-letter books." He borrowed his books, and, by dint of hard study, was admitted to practice in the county court of Solano at the end of a year. At the close of the following year he was admitted to practice his profession before the District Courts of the Sixth and Seventh Judicial Districts. He was afterwards entitled to practice by admission before the Supreme Court of the State and Circuit Court of the United States. His large business was extensive and his fees were fat, and he was enabled to retire from active practice in the courts in 1884. In 1882 he was elected State Senator from Yolo and Solano Counties, and served in the twenty-fifth Legislative Assembly during the regular and extra sessions. This was the notable period in which efforts were made to oust the Railroad Commissioners by joint resolution of the two Houses of the Legislature. Mr. Kelley opposed the movement, and by reason thereof he was, with other members, read out by the Democratic party at the famous Stockton convention.

Mr. Kelley came to Willows in 1885, and purchased the Willows Journal, which he edited and conducted in connection with W. H. Kelley for two years. A close logician and a master of vigorous English, Mr. Kelley soon lifted this newspaper from obscurity into the most flattering prosperity. Since his coming to Willows he has always identified himself with the business and social advancement of that town. His energy, shrewdness, persistence and knowledge of men and motives, have always brought him to the front, a cheerful leader, particularly of any forlorn hope in which his town requires prudent generalship. In the struggles for the division of the county and for the formation of Glenn County, Mr. Kelley was acknowledged by the opponents of that measure to be their most skillful and most formidable adversary. In 1888 he was sent as a delegate to the Democratic State Convention at Los Angeles. Mr. Kelley was married, in 1876, to Miss Louisa, daughter of Daniel Zumwalt, a pioneer of California and an old resident of the county.

NOTES ON LOCATION OF BEAR CREEK, WALLOWA CO. OR

At the time of Benjamin Wilson's death, Union County was part of Wallowa County. La Grande is the county seat of Union county now and may have been the county seat of Wallowa county then. The town of Wallowa isn't even the county seat of Wallowa county now, that is at Enterprise.

Diamond Prairie is near Bear Creek.

According to Oregon Geographic Names, p. 273:

Diamond Prairie, Wallowa County: This little prairie is west of the town of Wallowa. It is said to be named because of the shape.

I have highlighted where Bear Creek is on the map, but Diamond Prairie isn't shown.

According to on old picture of Charlotte (information on the back), two of her husbands were killed in the Black Indian War. Also states she died at age 84.

Uncle Carl Bennett reports Charlotte was living in Piatt County, Ill. when he was born (1887) and moved to Oregon shortly after.

Uncle Coyner's daughter, Doris Brewer, reports Benjamin and Charlotte moved to Oregon in 1871 or 1872. Doris has Eliza Ann's Bible which was presented to her by Benjamin in 1871 just before they left for Oregon.

Benjamin Wilson was found murdered - under a pile of brush. They thought either the Indians or a son-in-law had murdered him. Uncle Coyner said Benjamin was a short red or sandy haired man who looked like a Scotsman. Also he remembered Charlotte smoked a pipe.

The funeral notice for Charlotte in the "Morning Oregonian" of May 18, 1907 is as follows - Funeral of Charlotte E. Wilson will be held at the M.E. Church, Sellwood, today. Sat. at 2PM. Interment at Milwaukie Cemetery.

General Services has no record of Benjamin serving in the Civil War. (Doris)

Benjamin had been out the day before picking berries and that evening after dinner had cut and carried in the wood. He then loaded his gun and put a chair under the door handle or against it so it could not be opened. Charlotte questioned him but he would not explain until they went to their room. He took the gun and barricaded the door and she insisted he tell her why. Benjamin told her it was scary to hear someone plotting to kill you. The next morning early he took his gun and buckets and went out again in spite of Charlotte's protests.

Joshua (Coffman) and another man had been looking for work and when Joshua came home and found Benjamin gone, went out to look for him. He called and got an answer from Benjamin across the stream. He ask Benjamin to meet him at a footlog. When he got there and waited awhile and Benjamin didn't come, Joshua went back to the house. When Benjamin wasn't there, he went out to search for him.

When Benjamin was found twelve days later, some of the searchers thought there was no need for burial for his scattered remains, but Joshua said, "We are Christian people and he will be buried." Joshua got a quilt and gathered as much of the remains as he could and buried Benjamin in a deep grave near the house.

An old man by the name of Wilson in the lower Wallowa Valley is lost. He was out in the mountains with a son-in-law gathering berries - the latter took a horse around by a circuitous route, while the former started over the mountain alone, and has not since been heard of - ten days have elapsed, and every effort to find has unavailing.

(Papers checked through Sept. 18 - He was found the 24th)

County History states

"Another fiendish crime of similar character was committed in the summer of 1885 (date wrong) throwing the whole valley into a state of excitement - an old man by the name of Wilson met a tragic death while picking Huckleberries near the mouth of the Wallowa Canyon - the unfortunate man was alone at the time but was soon missed by his son-in-law who instituted a search for him - they found his head in a clump of bushes and his body near by. In the body were several gunshot wounds and upon his head were marks of a murderous club. There was no clue to the identity of the murderer and the most determined efforts on the part of relatives and friends brought to light nothing which would lead to the solution of the mystery.

Eloise writes - "You can see there were other fiendish murders before this one. We were told they did all they could to take the blame off the Indians because 1878 was the great uprising of the Cayuse Indians - they didn't want to panic the settlers."

Some people seemed to believe that an Indian did the killing. While it is not for the writer to express his convictions as to who committed the crime, those who have studied Indian warfare know that Indians usually did their killing either with the tomahawk or the bullet. Following the killing a scalp knife was frequently used. And again Indians were adverse to dragging or attempting to conceal their victims.

Some of the searching party thought there was sufficient evidence to convict Kauffman of the crime. He was arrested and tried for murder in Union county, but was acquitted for want of proof.

John Henry Wilson's Duel with an Indian

In the autumn of 1880 when returning from a hunting trip on the mountain south of the Wallowa canyon, John Henry Wilson told Win- slow P. Powers and others of a shooting affair he had with an Indian and at the same time he displayed bullet holes in his coat which he said were made by a gun while in the hands of the Indian.

Mr. Powers sent an account of the affair in and it was published in the Oregonian. As near as the writer can remember, it was like this: J. H. Wilson upon returning from a hunting trip was riding along a mountain side in the canyon south of the Wallowa river, when he was surprised to hear the report of a rifle near him.

Looking up the mountain side some 150 paces away he saw smoke and an Indian standing immediately beyond his pony. Wilson wheeled his horse behind a clump of trees and dismounted. While turning his horse a bullet passed through a fold of his coat.

Wilson then exchanged several shots with the Indian, felling his horse with the last shot. After this he saw no more of the would-be murderer, but saw another Indian on a horse some distance away.

Wilson then mounted his horse and hurried away from the place. (Thus ends the report in the Oregonian.)

Several days later other hunters saw the dead pony.

The author did not learn as to whether or not the Indian was hit by a ball from Wilson's gun; however, some years later some Nez Perce Indians let it be known that Wilson had gained their enmity through a shooting affair in the canyon.

The Murder of Benjamin Wilson The murder of Benjamin Wilson, the father of John Henry Wilson, in the summer of 1878, added to the gloom caused by the Indian war and the diphtheria of the same summer.

The writer knows of no white man being murdered in the West prior to this time and believes Mr. Wilson was the first white man to meet death at the hands of a murderer in the valley.

Up until a few years after this time the Wallowa river passed through the Lower valley in two channels, with something like a section of ground enclosed between these channels. In early days people designated this section of land as the Island.

Before domestic stock became too numerous, people would go into parts of this island in summertime and gather a supply of wild red raspberries.

The Wilson family included Benjamin and his wife; a single daughter, Mildred; a married daughter, Mrs. Kauffman, and her husband and their children, and a brother of Benjamin Wilson, known by the family and the neighbors as Uncle Joe, who lived on the south corner of Diamond Prairie near Bear creek, and Benjamin's son, John Henry Wilson, and his wife, who lived in

The majority and possibly all of the family one day went down to the island and returned that night feeling they had gathered enough raspberries to pay them for their work.

The next morning Benjamin asked his wife and daughters if they would like to go with him and gather more berries where he had found the good picking just at quitting time the evening before. The women folks declined as they wanted to prepare the berries they had gathered for winter use and do other necessary work about the house.

The son-in-law, Mr. Kauffman, then said, "I will go with you, father."

The following is the son-in-law's story from the time the two men left the house until Kauffman returned. Taking their containers with them they passed down across Diamond Prairie then across some 200 yards of brush land prior to crossing the south channel of the river on a foot log to where the berries were.

During the day the two men filled their containers and were ready to go home by mid-afternoon.

Kauffman started toward the foot-log. Wilson said to him, "I believe I will go this way and cross the river on a drift where I have crossed before. It is a nearer route and I may find berries where we can pick another day."

Kauffman said, "All right, you go that way and we will meet out on the edge of the prairie, and the one who gets there first will wait until the other comes."

"We agree," said Mr. Wilson.

Each one of them took his own route. Mr. Kauffman walked the foot log and on to the point where they agreed to meet and waited for a couple of hours or until the approach of twilight for the arrival of Wilson. Then Kauffman went back looking and calling. After an hour's search he went home.

Before his arrival the folks at home began to feel that something serious must have happened. When entering the house Kauffman asked, "Is father here?"

The answer quickly came, "No, he's not here. Where did you leave him?"

Mr. Kauffman then told them of the day's transactions as given above, then he stated that he would have looked longer for father but for the thought that he may have reached the edge of the prairie first and then decided to go on home.

Fear for Wilson's safety grew rapidly.

His people waited awhile hoping he would come in. At 11 o'clock P. M., all the family except Mrs. Kauffman and her two little ones went to look for him. They spent the greater part of the night searching in the brush on both sides of the stream and the drift he was supposed to have crossed on, with Kauffman directing the search.

In early morning they returned to their house. The neighbors were notified and a number of people joined the Wilsons and Mr. Kauffman in an all-day hunt, but without success.

The next day people from all over the lower half of the valley came and joined in the search. The hunt continued for some seven or eight days.

At one time Kauffman said to Mrs. Wilson, "Don't you believe that father has taken a notion to leave us?"

At another time he suggested to some members of the searching party that the Indians had probably captured father.

On the evening of the last day's hunt when some of the searchers were in the act of starting for their homes, a man caught the scent of decaying flesh. Following in the direction the scent came from, in a few hundred feet he came upon the remains of the murdered man.

The find was a considerable distance away from the route Wilson was supposed to have taken on his way to the proposed meeting place on Diamond Prairie.

After discovering the remains the finder called, and soon the other members of the searching party gathered around. When Mr. Kauffman arrived he gazed at the remains a few seconds and then looking up he said, "Father has committed suicide."

While the body was in an advanced stage of decomposition, yet it was plainly seen that he had been knifed several times. It appeared as though his throat had been cut to the neck bone. He had been killed into some brush and then green willows had been cut with a knife and stuck in front and over the

The Murder of Benjamin Wilson

The murder of Benjamin, the father of John Henry Wilson, in the summer of 1878, added to the gloom caused by the Indian war and the diphtheria of the same summer.

The writer knows of no white man being murdered in the Wallowa prior to this time and believes Mr. Wilson was the first white man to meet death at the hands of a murderer in the valley.

Up until a few years after this time the Wallowa valley passed through the Lower valley in two channels, with something like a section of ground enclosed between these channels. In early days people designated this section of land as the Island.

Before domestic stock became too numerous, people would go into parts of this island in summertime and gather a supply of wild red raspberries.

The Wilson family included Benjamin and his wife; a single daughter, Mildred; a married daughter, Mrs. Kauffman, and her husband and their children, and a brother of Benjamin Wilson, known by the family and the neighbors as Uncle Joe, who lived on the south corner of Diamond Prairie near Bear creek, and Benjamin's son, John Henry Wilson, and his wife, who lived in who gets there first will wait until

the other comes."

"We agree," said Mr. Wilson. Each one of them took his own route. Mr. Kauffman walked the foot log and on to the point where they agreed to meet and waited for a couple of hours or until the approach of twilight for the arrival of Wilson. Then Kauffman went back looking and calling. After an hour's search he went home.

Before his arrival the folks at home began to feel that something serious must have happened. When entering the house Kauffman asked, "Is father here?" The answer quickly came, "No, he's not here. Where did you leave him?" Mr. Kauffman then told them of the day's transactions as given above, then he stated that he would have looked longer for father but for the thought that he may have reached the edge of the prairie first and then decided to go on home.

Fear for Wilson's safety grew rapidly. His people waited awhile hoping he would come in. At 11 o'clock p. m., all the family except Mrs. Kauffman and her two little ones went to look for him. They spent the greater part of the night searching in the brush on both sides of the stream and the drift he was supposed to have crossed on, with Kauffman directing the search.

In early morning they returned to their house. The neighbors were notified and a number of people joined the Wilsons and Mr. Kauffman in an all-day hunt, but without success.

While the body was in an advanced stage of decomposition, yet it was plainly seen that he had been knifed several times. It appeared as though his throat had been cut to the neck bone. He had been killed and then dragged some 60 feet into some brush and then green willows had been cut with a knife and stuck in front and over the

of Oregon has not done anything in regard to my claim since 1883. At the beginning he did some writing for me, but I did not understand that I was constituting him my attorney. Now have I depended upon him so much, but have had others assist me in the case from time to time as I needed help. Mr. Eugene Ayres of St. Joseph, Mo., is now my attorney and since he received notice that A. J. Smith was my attorney of record I have tried to find said Smith to get his written withdrawal, but can not find him. He does not live at Dayton; according to my best information he is a traveling man for some wholesale house of some other city and I have failed to get into communication with him after the most diligent effort, and does not engage in the business as I understand. I therefore respectfully request that I be allowed appointment by having said Eugene Ayres as my attorney of record for the present; Palparaiso, Mo.

REMINISCENCES OF WALLOWA COUNTY

spondent during the year 1889. Little Elbert stood up primer in hand and learned so well that he later conducted a hardware business in Wallowa. (However he may have gone to other school later.)

Obadiah was the oldest son and married one of my school girls, Lizzie Stubblefield, sister to the little boy who fell out of a tree and hurt his back, as mentioned in a former chapter. Now there was a settler in the community named John Henry Wilson who had become much interested in mining prospects, having two claims on the head of Bear creek which he had named "The Brown Lead" and "The White Flag." John was very enthusiastic and would talk of these prospects by the hour if he could find listeners. A neighbor remarked that he didn't believe John Henry could be induced to utter three sentences without saying something about the mines. Obadiah "Obe" Rich offered to wager a new hat that he could get him to utter three or more sentences without mentioning the mines. His plan was to ask John a question and as soon as he answered it, at once ask another, and so on. The wager was made and the first time Ob met the farmer, miner, spoke to him thusly: "What kind of crop are you putting in this spring, John?" To which question, said John replied as follows: "Mostly oats and soon as I finish I'm off for the mines!" So Obe lost the wager but got quite a lot of satisfaction out of telling the story, which he frequently did.

Since John Henry Wilson has entered the narrative, the reader may indulge me a few more words concerning him. John was a unique character, energetic, positive in his likes and dislikes, an inveterate hunter and many a denizen of the forest lay stretched upon the sward from time to time, a victim of his unerring marksmanship. He had one obsession, hatred of Indians, his father being reputedly killed by a roving band of Redmen. The body was found in the timber just north of Diamond Prairie. J. H. died of that dread malady, cancer, about 15 years ago at Clarkston, Washington and of all the married couples living in Lower valley when I came to the country, so far as I know, Margaret, the wife of John Henry, is the sole survivor.

Early one morning in '88 I believe it was, Ben Rich came to my father's home requesting that he visit the Rich home without delay. Upon Father's return we were in-

Miners pursue dream

JACKSONVILLE, Ore. (UPI) — When Art Linebaugh was just 15 years old he followed his mother into a country store in Jacksonville. As she selected food from the shelf, the gray-haired woman behind the counter bent forward and told him a story.

She said that when she was his age, a Chinese friend took her into a secret mine not far from Jacksonville. The walls were thick with gold.

When the Chinese and whites had trouble in town, the Chinese miners dynamited the secret mine shut and left. They never returned.

From the mine you could see the steeple of a church. There was a spring nearby that never went dry.

One night a year after the old woman told him the story, Art and his mother both had a similar dream. In the dream the old woman said she was dying. She told them to come visit because she wanted to give them a box containing a map to the mine.

"That's why I had to go feelin' around these hills," Linebaugh says. "And it's going to pay off. It's going to make me and Ed and the old lady the richest people in the world."

Art "Rusty Bucket" Linebaugh and his friend Ed Coffman mine Sailor's Gulch west of Jacksonville. They live together in a shack with no running water or electricity. Coffman's 95-year-old wheelchair-bound wife lives with them.

Rusty Bucket has worked on his particular hillside mine for two years. He's mined the Jacksonville area since he was a kid.

Because he can't read or write, it's hard to figure just how long that's been, he says. "I'm past 30, I know that."

When Linebaugh isn't working his own mine, he takes a hammer and chisel and helps Coffman chip rock from another hillside mine. The two men have worked four years sinking the shaft about 20 feet into the mountain.

They haven't found any gold yet.

Each morning Coffman walks six miles to the Jubilee Cafe in Jacksonville. The cafe operators serve him a free breakfast and then give him any leftovers to take back to his wife and partner.

After breakfast he goes to the service station, across the street, pulls a can out of the old burlap sacks slung over his shoulder and puts kerosene in the can. He uses kerosene for the lamp in his mine.

For years the city paid him a nominal fee to sweep the streets when he came to town.

"Yeah I'm an old miner all right," Coffman says with a nearly toothless smile. In his young days, he says, he mined in shafts beneath the streets of Jacksonville.

Ed and his wife moved in with Linebaugh about seven years ago. "One day I was hungry and he brought me something to eat; that's the way it was," Linebaugh says, explaining the origin of the partnership.

Money gets a little low at the end of the month. The three live on $600 they collect from Social Security and the State Accident Insurance Fund.

But life isn't all bad. "God's Little Ackers," reads the sign on the porch.

A two-seater outhouse sits at the bottom of a hillside where Linebaugh enthusiastically shovels gravel and mud into a wheelbarrow.

This is the 351st hole Linebaugh's dug in his search, but he has a feeling about this one.

"I think this is it," he says.

When he strikes that rich vein, he's going to buy the whole mountain his shack is sitting on. Then he'll build a log house with a dance floor downstairs.

It will have a bar and "music of course — hillbilly music," Linebaugh says. "It's a junky looking place now, but after we get done with it, it won't be no junky place."

"It won't be long before I start the darn house," he adds. "I ain't going downhill. I'm going uphill all the way."

d for energy generation

Nancy Alden Bragg of Boulder, Colo., who belongs to a group of about 20 persons that has applied for a lease. "It is what the American public demands and it is what our survival demands."

Denver realtor S. Paul Wasserstein, another applicant, said, "We cannot set aside all land in the face of progress. The beauty of Yellowstone Park cannot be allowed to influence the development of alternative sources of power in other geothermal fields of our country. Why let our emotions restrict development of an energy source outside the park...?"

But National Park Service officials say there is a possible threat to the park, and the United States can ill afford to take a chance.

The threat has "broad international significance," said National Park Service Director William Whalen. "When you say 'parks' in America, Yellowstone is the first one that comes to mind. When a threat comes to a place like Yellowstone, you're going to find everybody in this country standing up to it."

"We believe there is a real possibility that the proposed utilization of geothermal resources west of Yellowstone National Park would seriously impair or destroy the principal resource of the park," stated Yellowstone Superintendent John Townsley and Regional Park Service Director Glen T. Bean in a recent letter to Dr. William P. Gregg, the agency's Washington chief of environmental compliance.

Commercial geothermal development in other parts of the world is thought to have harmed nearby geothermal areas.

Geyser Valley in New Zealand was destroyed when the Wairakei geothermal area was developed. The Beowawa Geysers in Nevada — once second to Yellowstone on the North American continent — dried up in 1961 following geothermal exploration in the previous two decades.

The government is studying how close geothermal development occurred to those areas, but the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management did not mention the possibility of similar destruction in their draft environmental impact statement on the Island Park and Targhee National Forest plans.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has cited that omission and also warned that geothermal development in Island Park may adversely affect air and water quality in Yellowstone.

A final impact statement by the Forest Service is due Oct. 1 and will recommend leasing in the Island Park area. Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus will have final approval.

The agency has recommended that no leasing occur without further study of possible detrimental damage to the park.

n global research of that part of the seas. The Wecoma will carry up to 16 researchers per "leg" of the "shuttle." Some will be engaged in other research.

The ocean is the center of attention for this weather research because scientists think that it affects our climate for months at a time, said Heath. They believe that the ocean acts as an energy source by storing, dispelling or transferring the energy of the sun back into the atmosphere.

By knowing exactly how this process works, through comparisons of ocean temperatures vs. weather in that immediate area, forecasters would be able to more accurately predict how wet, dry, cold or hot the climate would be for the coming months, said Heath.

The equatorial portion of the ocean is important as a laboratory because it is there that the ocean and the atmosphere interaction is less complicated than anywhere else and so it's easier to observe the changes.

Climatic forecasting is becoming so important that more than 100 nations are taking part in the year-long study of the world's weather. Countries are already standardizing their weather observations to make correlating of the information center. In addition to the Wecoma, more than 100 other ships will be monitoring weather over the 70 percent of the globe covered by oceans.

In addition, the United States, Soviet Union and European community are launching special satellites to gather even more information on world weather patterns. All of this data will be radioed to several world weather centers, where researchers will decide into what form the information can be used in computer forecasting models.

YSWCD Issues Reports, Plans Annual Meeting

Some 1,000 copies of the 1963 annual report of the Yamhill Soil & Water Conservation District went into the mail this week, according to Vernon Stephens, supervisor in charge of issuing the report.

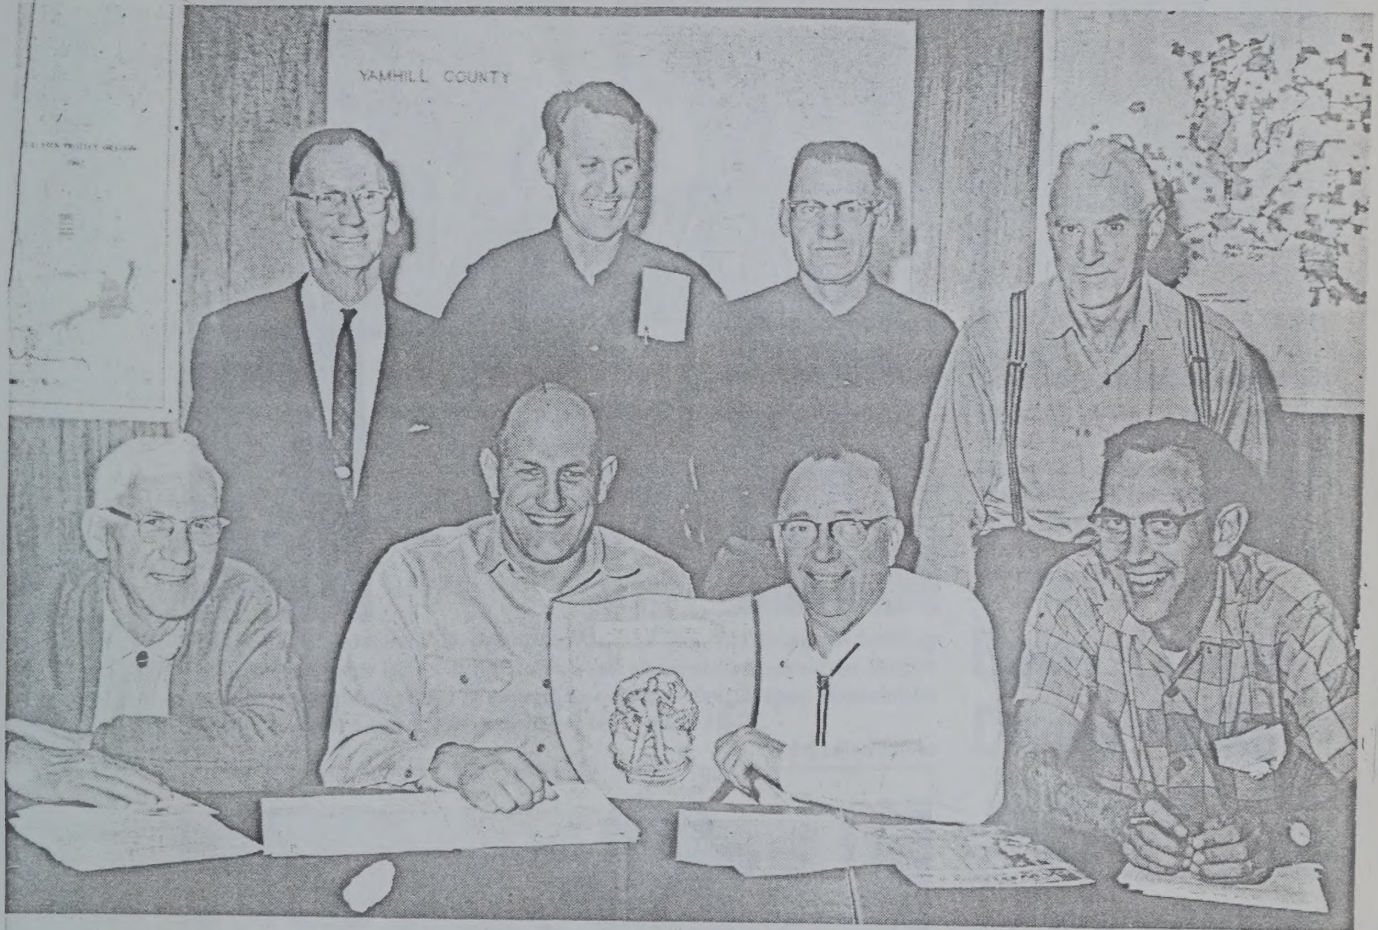

The report, which contains some 20 pages, represents a lot of work on the part of several people, Stephens said. Stephens was assisted in assembling the material and laying out the report by Rex Brown, supervisor representing the Carlton area who operates a tree farm on Panther Creek.

Mrs. Vera House, administrative clerk, ASCA, donated her time to address the reports prior to mailing. Other volunteers stamped the pamphlets during a day-long work session in an attempt to get the reports in the mail prior to the March 12 annual meeting in Sheridan.

The public is invited to attend the dinner meeting which will get underway at 7 p.m. at

Baker Confab Draws Folks

More than 200 persons gathered at Baker to attend the 17th annual meeting of the Oregon Association of Soil & Water Conservation districts, November 10-12.

Representing Yamhill SWCD were Stanley Christensen, Jr. chairman, and Rex Brown, vice-chairman of the board of supervisors. Others attending were Mrs. Rex Brown, Ed Laird of Carlton, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Schatz and daughter Pattie of Dundee and Frank Bennette of Newberg.

Miss Schatz was awarded third place in the conservation speech finals. She represented 19 counties in Northwestern Oregon after winning the semifinals at McMinnville.

YSWCD To Hold Annual Meeting At Amity Grade On March 10

Annual meeting of the Yamhill Soil & Water Conservation District will be held Thursday March 10, at 8:00 p.m. in the Amity Grade School cafeteria, according to Stanley Christensen, chairman.

A short business meeting will be conducted, to be followed by an illustrated talk by Richard Gardner, the prize winning speech by Patti Schatz, Newberg High School senior, some unannounced surprises, drawing for a door prize, and homemade pie and coffee for all.

The terms of supervisors Rudy Schaad, Newberg area, and Rex Brown, Carlton area, are expiring. People attending riculum of McMinnville schools, will give some of the highlights of the Outdoor Education school held for certain 6th grade students. They went to Camp Trestle Glenn near Estacada for a full week of outdoor activities as they studied the inter-relationship of soil, water, trees, wildlife and weather. These subjects had been studied in the classrooms previously. These sessions have always provided some interesting angles for the adults that assist in the work.

Patti Schatz will give her seven minute speech on wildlife that won third place in the State Conservation Speech contest for high school students.

Christensen urged that all cooperators of the SWCD living in the vicinity of Amity attend this meeting. The annual meeting is rotated between the several communities of Yamhill County to give each section an equal opportunity to attend. All persons interested in conservation and future development of water resources are also invited as this is an open meeting for all.

At this place is where we had a family reunion for 33 years. I the top of a mountain, the window I marked to the bathroom - Alma was brushing her teeth and looked out the window - and a deer was looking in the window at her.

Tree Farmer Near Carlton Harvests Now

"Fern and fir, the land use is a natural," said Charles Sitton, Jr. of the Carlton area, who is busy harvesting Christmas trees for the Portland market.

Sitton's Christmas tree business might be called a winter farming enterprise on a cut-over forest area that has reseeded itself and continues to supply the enterprise with quality Douglas Fir.

Sitton said his cut-over land had been burned until the brush disappeared and the fern became dominate. The fern helps shade the small fir seedlings and when a Christmas tree is harvested there are at least four trees to take its place.

"It takes about five to seven years to grow a five to six foot fir tree with scarring," he said. Scarring is a means of slowing down the growth of the fir tree so that there will be more growth in between the whorls or the main branches. A well branched Christmas tree is in demand by wholesalers and customers.

Sitton's trees are scarred two to three times during the lifetime of each tree. The tree will grow on an average of a foot a year with 6 to 15 inches as an ideal.

A wholesaler in Portland pays Sitton a dollar per tree regardless of tree size. Large trees are also available on special orders. Some 2,500 trees on an average are harvested on the 65 to 70 Christmas tree acreage.

"We like to cut our trees after a frost in our higher elevations because the tree takes on a dark green. At lower elevations the trees at this time lack the dark green color for Christmas," said Sitton.

"Deer are no problem to our operation. As far as I am concerned the deer moving back and forth through this particular clearing are entitled to eat one or two of the trees because they certainly plant plenty of seeds. We don't even mind if a buck cleans his horns, the scarring that he does on the trees will slow down the growth and make for a more desirable Christmas tree," Sitton said.

You reach Rex's small white cottage by an upward-winding gravel road that ends in his yard. His little clearing pushes like a finger into 130-foot high Douglas-firs.

SOUNDS AND SMELLS of the forest pervade this opening; deer, grouse and raccoon are never far away. "Had 10 deer in my yard at one time the other morning," he told me. A forest-fed stream ripples and glides through the clearing, hurrying down to Panther Creek. Everything about the whole place is shipshape.

Mrs. Brown—Alma—keeps the home in perfect order. Since rain falls on these coast range forests two days out of three, wet clothes and muddy boots are unpleasant facts the homemaker must face. But one glance into the Brown home shows surroundings as neat as a pin. Rex and Alma are

There is one Cletrac over 30 years old that was formerly used at a CCC project; he has this venerable hulk of metal in running order. He also has a 21-year-old Allis-Chalmers, equal to a D6 in capacity. His one-man sawmill is in a shed about 100 feet from the home.

Except when Alma occasionally lends a hand in sawing, the Brown Tree Farm is a one-man enterprise. Rex feels the trees, skids them to a landing, and saws some of them into rough cants.

Presently he is logging about 50,000 board feet yearly. He sells the better logs and keeps for home sawing those under 12 inches, and those that are quite rough. He gets about the same price for cants as for logs, around $50 per thousand feet. Occasionally it is very profitable to run the mill, as during the week I visited him.

"I TOOK $2,300 off a half acre this week from just 21 trees," he told me. "A man called up and asked me to and not overtake his growth, but the present under-harvest supplies his needs. The most productive area is a 58-year-old stand of Douglas-fir on some 45 acres. Another 12 acres has Douglas-fir slightly over 90 years old. The rest is a mixture of mature trees and young stands, including some areas not fully stocked. Many stands—all Douglas-fir—will average about 35,000 board feet per acre, with some stands holding far more. The merchantable stands are in beautiful order, as you would expect after repeated, expert thinnings.

The 58-year stands extends to the edge of the yard, where Rex had a spring-held tape around a specimen tree for instant measurement of growth. Diameter was 17.1 inches in April, 1957. The metal scale showed 19.5 inches six growing seasons later—one inch in diameter every three years.

THE FORESTER will greatly admire Rex's work. Here is a small fect world and there probably is no perfect forest, small or large. Rex does have 10 acres of wet swales largely occupied by limby hardwoods, principally the Oregon maple. He hacks away at these potentially rich Douglas-fir sites, admitting that a lot of time and effort goes into the conversion of one such acre to Douglas-fir. His solution is to transplant five-year-old Douglas-fir seedlings, moving a shovelful of earth with each.

When I first met Rex back in 1949, he was worrying about bracken fern which in some openings grew head high, smothering douglas-fir seedlings. That problem he overcame by the same transplanting of large wildlings. Meeting one problem, he tackles another one. When you own a woodland, there is always something you haven't gotten around to doing.

Rex's long participation on the county forestry committee (for two years he was on a state farm forestry committee) and his leadership of the county Soil Conservation District Board have added to his understanding of conservation problems. State Farm Forester Ken Palen has long been a valued consultant.

REX CREDITS Paul Goodmonson, former OSU extension forestry specialist and now a Christmas tree grower and tree farmer, with getting him started back in 1950. Early in 1963 Rex was nominated for Yamhill County's Forest Farmer of the Year and later in the year received that recognition.

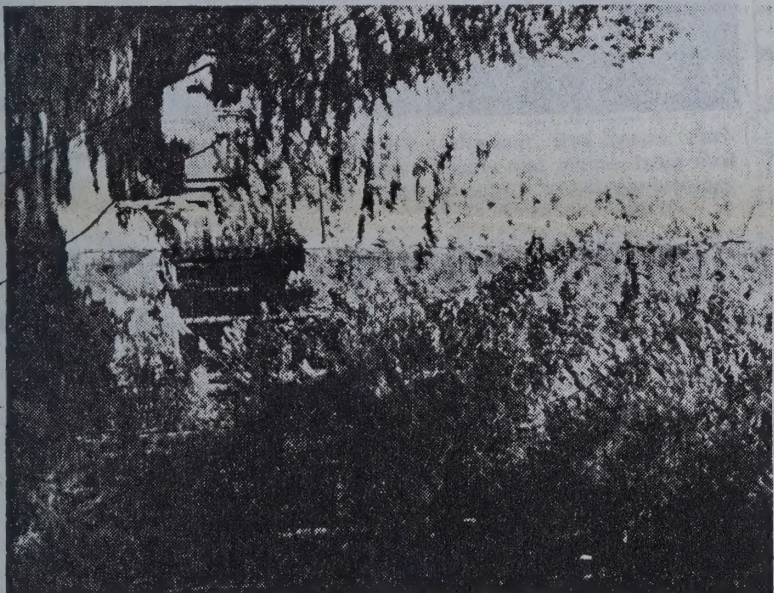

While Rex Brown's woodland is one of the smallest woods known to me that has supported a family year in and year out for a long period, there are other woodland farms in Oregon that have done it. One high-site 800-acre woodland in Northwest Oregon is almost a specialty tree farm, getting most income from exceedingly long Douglas-fir poles, and supporting two families.

Much is said these days about conservation of resources. It is close to being the nation's No. 1 problem. One small owner cannot do a great deal, but he can improve the land he has. As Dr. James B. Conant says in reporting his commission's intensive study of the American high school,

OREGON TREE FARMER-of-the-year, Rex Brown, Carlton, Ore., receives congratulations and plaque from Gail Edwards, Montesano, Wash., queen of the 25th anniversary tree farm celebration to be held in Montesano May 21.

Carlton Resident Wins Award As Tree Farmer

Rex Brown, Carlton, Ore., was named Tree Farmer-of-the-Year by the Forestry Committee of the Portland Chamber of Commerce Monday in a special presentation at the Benson Hotel.

Brown was selected from three finalists who had been chosen after screening of all Oregon's tree farmers.

The other two finalists were Willard G. Deardorff, Canby, and Ed C. Bachtold, Walla Walla, whose tree farm is located near Milton-Freewater.

The award, an engraved plaque, was presented to Brown by A. E. Grantham, chairman of the Chamber's Forestry Committee at the weekly luncheon of the Chamber's members forum at the Benson Hotel.

It was the first Tree Farmer-of-the-Year award, to be presented annually by the Portland Chamber. Its origin marks the 25th anniversary of tree farms being observed this year.

On May 21, a one-day celebration observing the tree farm movement is planned at Montesano, Wash. Gail Edwards, Montesano, will reign at the celebration as its queen. She was present Monday at the Chamber meeting to issue invitations to the Portland community to attend the fete.

In outlining the basis for Brown's award, Grantham pointed out that Brown purchased the property in 1927. He began cutting the old-growth down to a 30-inch diameter in 1947. He had completed this operation by 1950.

In 1951 and 1952, he planted 1,200 trees. Since that time, he has been planting openings steadily using natural seedlings from two to four feet tall.

Carlton Tree Farmer Makes a Good Living From Just 165 Acres

By CHARLES R. ROSS, Extension Forestry Specialist, OSU

Occasionally we foresters see a small woodland that makes the perfect picture. Rex Brown, who lives on a 165-acre tree farm near Carlton, about 50 miles southeast of Portland, has that kind of a place—a dream woodland.

It calls to mind an economic study that was being circulated in western Oregon and Washington about 18 years ago. It posed this question: How many acres of average Douglas-fir forest are needed to support a family if labor income is taken by that family?

Hopefully it suggested that the stable pattern of Scandinavian family forests might evolve in the Pacific Northwest. This study figured that 160 acres of Douglas-fir forest could support a family. It would have the potential for an annual harvest of up to 160,000 board feet, although decades might be required to develop some stands to such a yield.

Well, Rex Brown has built the kind of family forest they were talking about. He has completely supported his family on his woods since 1949, and has much more timber today than when he started.

The Brown Certified West Coast Tree Farm has a total area of 175 acres, of which five are tillable and five are occupied by the home site with two or three outbuildings, including one of the smallest sawmills in Oregon. You reach Rex's small white cottage by an upward-winding gravel road that ends in his yard. His little clearing pushes like a finger into 130-foot high Douglas-firs.

SOUNDS AND SMELLS of the forest pervade this opening; deer, grouse and raccoon are never far away. "Had 10 deer in my yard at one time the other morning," he told me. A forest-fed stream ripples and flides through now alone on the woodland farm since Mary Jane, their only child, left four years ago to work at Western Electric in Portland. She returns every weekend that she can.

His woodland doesn't look like it, but Rex has made cuttings every year for almost 20 years. He thins, takes older trees, blowdowns and dying trees. Alert and strong at 61, Rex is an orderly and thoughtful man who knows how to make use of what he has. He lives simply, but his home is attractive and he drives a late model car.

HE IS THE TYPE of person who always looks ahead. "Rex was working at a mill but he wanted a farm to fall back on, just in case," Alma explains. "He bought this place in 1928. He felt he could make out here if he had to." They did not move on the place until 1947, and that was when Rex began timber cropping. Before, he was a machinist at the Crown Wilmette Paper Mills (now Crown Zellerbach) at Camas, Wash.

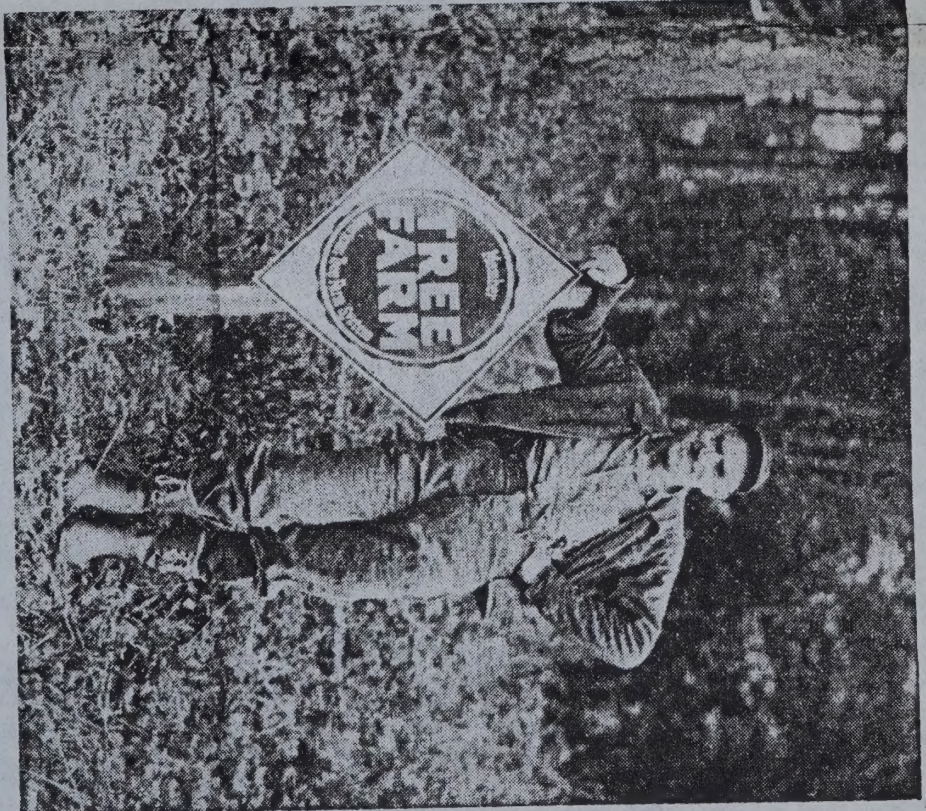

His ability to maintain tractors and a one-man sawmill, and other equipment, is no small part of his woodland achievement.

There is one Cletrac over 30 years old that was formerly used at a CCC project; he has this venerable hulk of metal in running order. He also has a 21-year-old Allis-Chalmers, equal to a D6 in capacity. His one-man sawmill is in a shed about 100 feet from the home.

Except when Alma occasionally lends a hand in sawing, the Brown Tree Farm is a one-man enterprise. Rex fells the trees, skids them to a landing, and saws some of them into rough cuts.

Presently he is logging about 50,000 board feet yearly. He sells the better saw out a special order for him." The trees were 18 to 24 inches in diameter.

Rex could log 100,000 feet yearly and not overtake his growth, but the present under-harvest supplies his needs. The most productive area is a 58-year-old stand of Douglas-fir on some 45 acres. Another 12 acres has Douglas-fir slightly over 90 years old. Dear Morn

Dear Shirley,

I will start a line before I have to go to the Museum at 12:30 as he opens at 1 P.M.

I have sure been busy, as you no doubt know I had Harold my friend here taking care of him from March to July. When he went unconscious I had him moved by ambulance to the hospital in Portland then in 5 days to a nursing home here in Oregon City where I could go twice a day to help take care of him. I now have most of his bills paid as I have been well reimbursed for his case. I never saw anyone so thin in my life as he was was just a skeleton.

Then on Sept 9th my sister-in-law Rex's wife died - She had spent much time with Dick & Pearl (my brother) since Rex's death. Just had a pain between her shoulders which she had for 10 years or more. Seemed a little more annoying and Pearl insisted she had good insurance so she was going to take her for some tests and she could give her something for this pain - Pearl left after the tests when Alma got drowsy. at 3:45 AM they hospital called and said come at once. Mary Jane (Rex's dau) went right up to Vancouver when Pearl said they would take her in for tests - She passed away at 6:30 A.M. No pain or struggle at all - A good way to go but so horrible on Mary Jane - She looked like a statue at the graveside services. She says now I have no one. But Dick's girls will see that she's O.K. Mildred lives close to her.

They had to empty Alma's apartment, she had gotten some nice new things as she left a quite a lot at the farm. Now they are emptying out the farm house. Mary Jane was going to keep it and retire there but now I wonder that her Mother is gone -

Rex was very active in "Trees for Trust" and Water & Soil Conservation. He had received the highest honor the State gives for his work. We knew he was a big guy in his County but until Mary Jane gave me his Clippings, I had no idea how big.
He had thanks & honors from Kenya,
South Africa and many States in U.S and several Senators & Presidents from Johnson down. I don't know why she didn't save these letters for herself she knew Auntie was the scavenger of the family. One man wrote a letter stating he had 4 years in College but learned more from 4 1/2 hrs with Rex
Brown than he ever did in College.

How loved his trees - He had a Certified tree farm - He fought Clear Cutting and Gov Hickie in Alaska - you notice Hickie got only one term in office - Has been over 15 months since he is gone and I still miss him - I really think Alma grieved for him as they had such a good time together - She was active in these things with him - She said yes she made the Lemon pies for them - Rex laughed when he told me they wanted him to run for Commissioner, said it was too hard to tell them he didn't even have an 8th Grade Diploma -

Les Brothers and wife were down the first of Sept. they came by here and I got keep the Cousins together and we met at Chuck Wagon, restaurant, all for dinner - They were all so glad to be together - Cleo has had to be transposed several times and I told my kids they might not see him again if they didn't this time.

We have been having a busy time at the Museum - Had 174 guests Sept 19th at the "Old Homes tour" and we will ^{have} about 100 at the Governor's preservation week, ~~that's~~ this Fri & Sat. They are rededicating the Holmes House where the first Territorial Governor was inaugurated. You see our wisdoms were here in 1853 and it didn't become a state until 1859. See why I love my Oregon and can talk this history.

Mrs. Fish said she was so happy to talk with you. She didn't lend anything to me but no doubt she will - Most of this was her family line - Mine is the Randall which I have as Revolutionary Soldiers.

Must close as my ride will be by in a few minutes -

Much Love & God Bless

Eloise

Dear Shirley,

Well Blessings to you for all the goodie bits - they are surely appreciated - I've tried so hard to get the duling information in the past 15 years and have never yet gotten an answer - They are very good people.

I'm going to jump around on this letter as I'm waiting for a phone call and see the mailman just got by before I got my mail in the box.

No Shirley, my Parents were not divorced - Our Dad died with diabetes Apr 26 1918. We were just little kids and you will never know how we missed him. He was such a happy mush pot - loved us kids to death. Was only sick 3 days and gone. Ill of course but did his milking and chores as usual. It is wonderful that he had taught and trained Rex and Dick to do as he did. Rex at 13½ years felt the responsibility and took wonderful care of us. Charles then 4 years said Rex is the only Dad he ever knew. Mom was married twice before she married Edgar. I never mention the others in my genealogy - The first one became very abusive to us kids first, then mom, when he did not succeed in getting all our Dad's money which was ½ us kids. The other one a wonderful finished Carpenter but was a union man and wouldn't work on a job unless it was union. In those days there was no unions so we kids supported him for a while - Edgar was a wonderful Christian man and every bit as fine as our own Dad. He married Mahala Mathony first when he was about 40 years old - He took care of his parents until they died - Later he married ^{Mom} Haley and took care of her folks until they were gone - Haley had cancer for 18 years Mom took care of her the last 11 years she lived, then went to take care of Della Beaver Clark (Dad's step sister) until she died, then to the Coopers - (Uncle Wiley Wilson's in laws) Haley's brother that lived with Edger passed away and ^{he} decided Mom was working too hard taking care of 2 bedfast people - So they were married Dec 17, 1948. They were the happiest people you ever saw. Rex said, "I'm so glad Mom had such love and happiness before she was gone. She died in 1956 -

I was surprised to see (in the obits) Pearl listed as wife of Bert White. She divorced him many years before perhaps - 5 or 6 years. Bert a sweet quiet man - They had a nice home on a filbert farm. When he got ill he tried to get her to come home - He was so lonely for Mom - Harold went after her and she would rather be in welfare than in their nice home with hired help.

I could tell you a real funny story at this point but better left unsaid. It's a big laugh now.

and on Minnie Duling Simmons obit - She was a very sweet lovely gal - When I went to visit them and she was the baby sister, she would sit on my lap and cry when I left. When she graduated she came down to Bernice & Harvey's in Portland and took Nurses Training. Married Kenneth Simmons youngest bro - Had lovely family. Going to Church made a left hand turn in front of a speeding car - She died next day.

On Kenneth Dealings obit, I got a little surprise there too. I didn't know he had gone to Potato Crops. When Les and I visited he was Crimson Clover seed King. Della his mother wrote Mom, that the alarm went off in the morning he got up and dressed and was tying his shoes and fell over dead in the floor. The obit would be right, that he died after going to bed from an agriculture meeting. He lived about a mile from his folks. Was during the war and he bought out every farm in sight and let the folks live in their homes - all he wanted was to cultivate and fertilize the land and plant to the Crimson Clover. It was a beautiful sight to drive for miles and see these beautiful fields of red Clover waving in the breeze. The land office come down hard on prices they could pay for land - If Kenneth wanted it he had it regardless of price. When we were up there we heard the story of him paying a good price for another place then gave $5,000 for a Billy Goat, so he could have the farm close to him. He worked himself to death feeding food during the war years he no doubt changed over to growing potatoes. Kenneth Simmons, Zoas husband was called the Potato King up there. Later died with Cancer.

In about 1930 I went up with my aunt at Madras for my 2 weeks vacation, we went out to the little Lone Pine Church and all went home with Kenneth & Zoa. They had a 2 months old baby that wasn't doing a bit good

I was on vacation from the Baby Home and they were glad to see me. I saw what the trouble was and took care of her before until he left. They were so glad and wanted me to stay on for several days. She did fine after that and was an A student and run for Miss Oregon. She had already won as Miss Jefferson Co. I think it was 2nd that she came in on the contest. She must be 55 years old now.

[On the Snowden White obit - during the war he worked for the Road dept. was flagman & watchman - He was much older and happy for the job. They were patching the Chuck holes in the roads and a wild dromedary went past his signaling and knocked him over and the tank of hot tar and Snod was terribly burned with the hot tar, was in the hospital for seems like a year & half, was never well after that.)

On Aunt Nancy's obit - She was a real sweetie like Oest Grandma. There was a little walkway with railing to Della's house. They would put her to bed at night and lay her fire for morning. She had gotten cold (it gets beastly cold over there) and got up and lit her fire. When they went in to take her breakfast she was asleep with her Bible in her hand and her glasses on. The fire hadn't burned out yet but she was gone in her Rocking Chair.

Back to Kenneth Duling's obit, you will note, sister Mrs H. W. Johnson, Culver - that is Bernice that married Harvey William Johnson - he is my first Cousin. Aunt Lulu, Mom's sister had Harvey and David. Dave was with us a lot now lives at the Senior Estates - Comes by for me occasionally and we go out to dinner - Mom's wife is fine too. Dave now has Leukemia now but doing fine.

Harvey has been in the nursing home a couple of years now - Very close to their home. Bernice goes down to feed him. They had their 60 wedding anniversary lately - He seemed real good that day - The Church put on a little dinner for them - the nurse went along and took him in the wheel chair. He really enjoyed it and shook hands with everybody. When he got tired they took him back. He will be 83 in July.

I guess this is enough rambling on - You can tell I enjoyed the obits. Some of their kids came here and copied material and was very generous with $5 bills - which I refused - all I asked is that they get the Duling birthdates and correct line in the way they were born. ooph there goes the phone

Your letter came today on the Owens - Wilson News - I always say if the Good Lord wants us to find them - we will - Don't know why He makes it so difficult - I really think perhaps the answer might be in Ireland - then it gets tough.

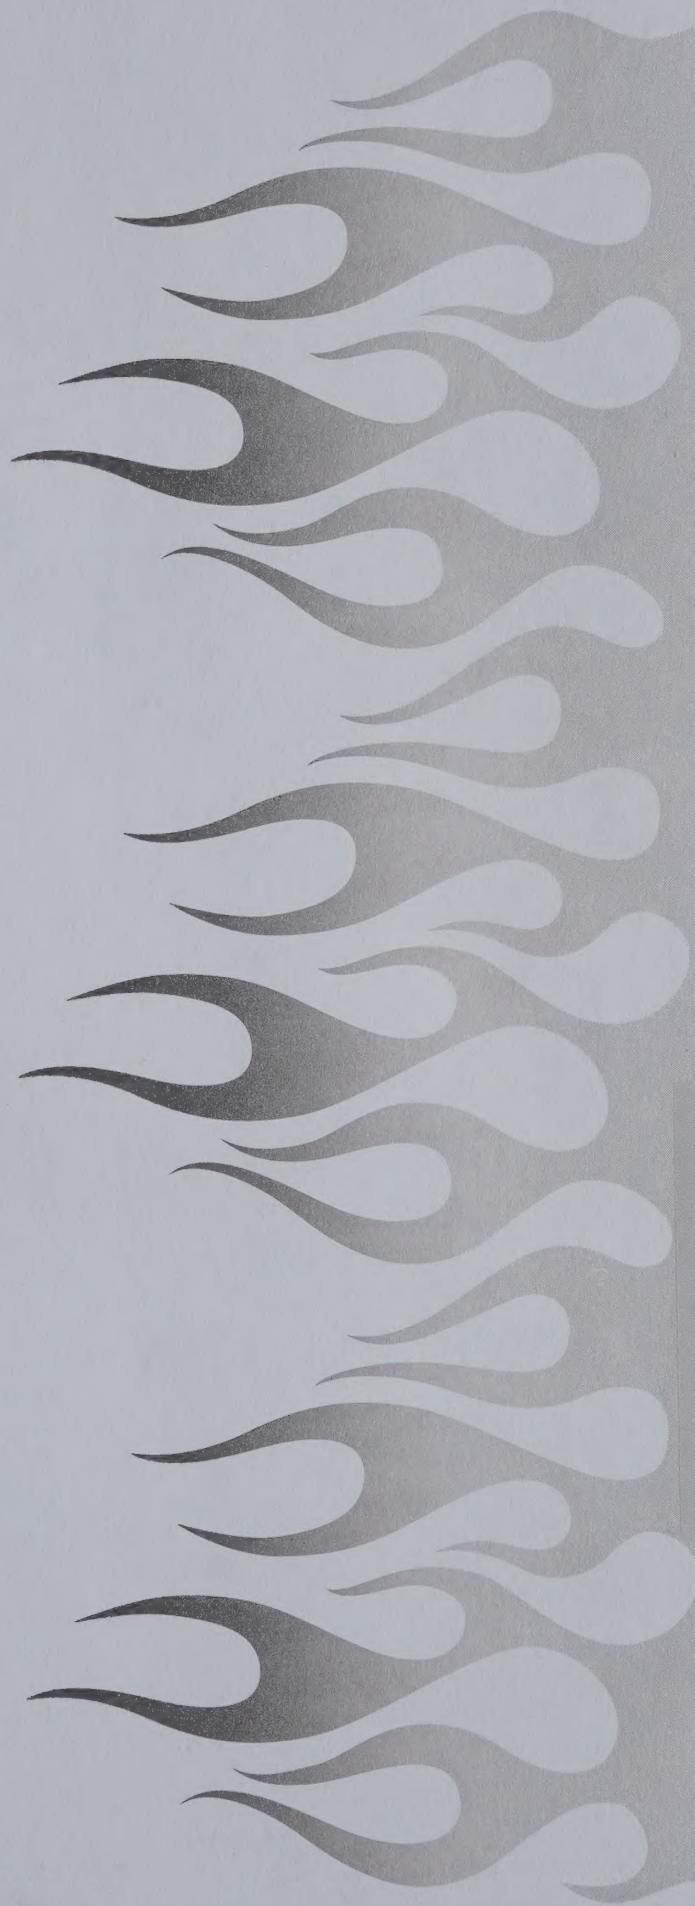

You said Maurice's Cousin was doing Owens book - Did she ever mention finding the Owens in Virginia (I think it was). He married a lovely beautiful Indian Maiden and had 5 children - at one time (which I had never heard of before) the govt was paying a bounty for Indian scalps. This Owens was a Scalawag. He killed his wife and 5 children and scalped them for bounty then left the state.

A Mrs Anderson in Portland was telling me they had a guest speaker at their Genealogical Forum and she was working on Owens line. So was Mrs Andersson - Perhaps the speaker, it wasn't her line - Mrs Anderson said she went home hoping she'd never find the Owens belonged in their line or she would quit working on it. I've never been able to get in touch with her the last 10 years or so - Could be gone now.

Will copy the other Magnett but you will note the place of birth is wrong. Carolyn must have supplied them. As she said the sheet had no dates.

Bye -

Eloise

Dear Shirley,

We are leaving today for a trip to the desert until about the end of the month, then from March 4 to March 18 I will be in Seattle with my niece when she has a baby. So no more genealogy for awhile. But I did want to let you know what I have done since last writing.

Thank you so much for your letter of Jan 27th. I have written to Charles Wilson in Kansas City, but so far no answer.

I had many people in Madison Co, KY, so sent for the Deed Index there, and have enclosed a copy of the Wilson names from that Index. My film which I ordered for some of the deeds came in Thursday but I only had time to check one of them and the Index for Lincoln Co. I've put the others on a 6 months hold, so will be able to check them when I get back in March.

The deeds checked are the only ones I looked at this time. The other films are for Books D, H-K, L and P-R. I ordered what looked best for most of my names -- but now I wish I had Books A and B for John Wilson. If you have access to those at the Ft. Wayne Library, why don't you check them to see if they give us any clues through people mentioned or the witnesses.

The ones I did see in Books N and O are given on another page for you. But they're pretty late, I think.

I will also try to summarize quickly for you the Deeds in Lincoln Co which I got from the Index.

Sorry to be in such haste, but I still have to load the motor home before we leave today.

Sincerely,

Jean

It looks like Knox and Whitley are the best places to search.

I found no Sears in Lincoln, and the earliest in Madison Co. were in 1892!

Courthouse burned in '76 - Clerk's rec. partially destroyed.

On the 3d day of May, 1813, the Grand Jury of Bath returned an indictment against Samuel Donley on a charge of killing William Cantrill. On the 4th day of May, 1813, he was arraigned and pled not guilty, and thereupon come the following jury, to wit: John Williams, James Mosely, John McNabb, Rowland Richards, William Richards, William Poor, John Wilson, James McCollough, John Ner-ris, Philip Williams, Andrew Biggs, and Richard Lyman. On the 5th day of May the jury returned the following verdict: We, the jury, find the defendant, William Donley, guilty of voluntary manslaughter, and that he shall undergo an imprisonment at hard labor in the jail and penitentiary house of this State for the time of two years, five lunar months, and fifteen days. This was the first conviction for a felony in the county.

On the 26th day of July, 1817, Ellenor Gillespie was hung for murdering her husband. She was executed at the forks of the road at the foot of the hill on the Mt. Sterling pike. The following are the names of the jurors who found her guilty, viz: Philip Williams, William Smith, Robert Downs, Thomas Perry, Cordon Griffin, Drury B. Boyd, James Thompson, William Miller, Christopher Oakley, George Butcher, John Trumbo, and Jarvis Erennigan. The following named persons constituted the guard at the gallows: George Cloyd, Jr., Charley Cooper, Asa Maxey Denny Burns, Billy Burns, and David Fathey. David Hynoman erected the gallows upon which she was hung, and the County Court allowed him $6 for it.

During the time that Mrs. Gillespie was confined in jail George Lansdown went in and undressed himself, and she donned his apparel and endeavored to make her escape by walking boldly out of the jail door, but David Fathey was the guard at the jail and discovered the deception and arrested her as she was leaving. Lansdown was very much incensed against Fathey for not permitting the woman to escape and abused him, whereupon Fathey resented his insults and they had a severe fight and Fathey whipped him.

On the 20th day of November, 1857, at 5 o'clock, P. M., Milton Tackett was hung by the Sheriff, at the forks of the road on the Wyoming pike, for the murder of Frank Fielder. W. P. Conner was the Sheriff who carried into execution the law. It was impossible to procure a jury in his case in this county, and the Court made an order directing the Sheriff to go into Nicholas County and summon one, and the following are the jurors who found him guilty of murder, viz.: George Holland, G. W. Frontnemer, Robert Potts, James Scobee, William Reid, Leroy Davidson, David Allen, W. W. Howe, Robert Stephenson, William Watts, John Durham, and Coleman Ratliffe. The verdict was rendered by the jury 14 minutes after 4 o'clock, P. M., September 19th, 1857. J. W. Moore was the Circuit Judge and passed sentence of death on Tackett the same evening.

pletion any scheme set on foot for the betterment of the people. He was a member, and for many years a class leader, in the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics he always voted for the Democratic candidates.

To our subject and his estimable wife there were born a large family of children, eleven in number. Of these James W. is engaged as a general merchant in Bucklin, Mo.; Eliza F. is deceased; John T. is a farmer of this county; Sarah F. is at home with her mother; Emily E. married J. W. Rouse, a banker of Bucklin; Lulu is now Mrs. A. W. Cassidy, a merchant of Lamar, Mo.; Minnie F. is engaged in teaching school at Monroe City; Julia B. is the wife of W. T. Stamper, and both are school teachers of note in Corvallis, Mont.; William W. is a farmer of Barton County, Mo.; Annie E. is at home; Julia A. is deceased.

Mrs. Jackson has retained one hundred and twenty acres of the home place, to the cultivation of which she gives her attention, and is manifesting herself to be a woman of business ability. The family occupy the brick residence which was erected by Mr. Jackson in 1855. She is a faithful, consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and an active worker in the same. Educational measures find in her a warm friend, as she is strongly in favor of good schools and teachers.

THOMAS C. WILSON. This prominent business man of Hannibal was born in Lincoln County, Mo., April 12, 1851. He is the son of Alexander K. and Alzira M. (Gibson) Wilson, the former of whom was born April 1, 1813. He in turn was the son of David Wilson, a native of Ireland, who emigrated to the United States in 1809, settling in North Carolina. Eight years later he removed to St. Louis, Mo., and after a stay there of two years became a resident of Lincoln County, where he passed his time in farming until his decease, in 1821. The grandfather of our subject married a Miss Elder. All of their children are now deceased. Mrs. Wilson passed away in Lincoln County in 1867, at the age of ninety-seven years.

The father of our subject was reared to mature years in Lincoln County and, when of sufficient age, learned the blacksmith's trade, which occupation he followed the greater part of his life. After the formation of the Republican party he voted for its candidates, being one of the twelve men in Lincoln County who cast a ballot for Lincoln, in 1861. He departed this life February 8, 1886. Alzira, his wife, was born in what was many years ago the Territory of Louisiana, but now the State of Missouri, April 27, 1816. Her father was Gayon Gibson, and the maiden name of her mother Selamy Sitton. The former was the son of Gayon Gibson, Sr., whose birth occurred in Ireland, January 7, 1744. He crossed the Atlantic in 1772 and in this country was married to Eleanor Kennedy, December 8, 1773. He died of yellow fever in Augusta, Ga., in 1795. Gayon was born in South Carolina, October 7, 1787, and his wife was a native of North Carolina, her birth occurring October 5, 1793. Their marriage took place in Tennessee, October 10, 1811, and to them were born eleven children, of whom Alzira was the third. The grandfather died January 8, 1848. Selamy Sitton was the daughter of Joseph and Diana (Beck) Sitton and was the youngest member of a family of twelve children. Joseph Sitton was a native of Scotland, in which land his family were very prominent and noted people.

Grandfather Gibson fought as a soldier during the Indian War. He went to what is now Missouri in 1808, but three years later returned to Tennessee, where he was married, and brought his wife to his new home, reaching Kennedy Fort on Christmas Day, 1811. Although the parents of eleven children, fifty years rolled by before there was a natural death in the family.

The parents of our subject were married in Lincoln County, Mo., November 6, 1843, and unto them were born eight children. Ann Isabella is now the wife of John M. Gladney, of Lincoln County, and the mother of ten children. Luther M. died in February, 1894, leaving five children; Franklin L. is a resident of Bowling Green, this State; Zelima F. died in Lincoln County in 1868; Thomas C. was the next born; Sarah K. is living in Lincoln County, in which section Alexander H. also makes his home; Charles William died in Lincoln County, in 1864. The mother of this family departed this life March 4, 1888, in the above county. Alexander Wilson was for many years Justice of the Peace of Lincoln County and, at one time, was Presiding Judge of the County Court.

The original of this sketch was reared to manhood in his native county, where he received the advantages of a common-school education. On attaining his seventeenth year he took a course of study in the Hardee College at Louisiana, Mo., and in 1869 entered the State University at Columbia, from which institution he was graduated in 1874. After leaving the university he engaged in civil engineering for the St. Louis & Hannibal Railroad Company, remaining in their employ until 1882. That year he began contracting for railroads, supplying the different corporations with ties and railroad lumber, and is still engaged in this branch of business.

In 1891 our subject, in company with H. L. Bock, W. K. Kavanaugh, Louis Kavanaugh, and a Mr. Strange, organized the Union Sand Company, in which Mr. Wilson is still one of the prominent stockholders. In March, 1894, he, with R. H. Stillwell, Cornelius Voorhis, and Z. Fielder, established the Hannibal Pressed Brick Company, of which he is now Secretary and Treasurer, R. H. Stillwell President and C. Voorhis Vice-President. The company have a capital stock of $40,000. Their yards are located about two miles south of Hannibal and the capacity of the plant is thirty-five thousand brick per day. There they have a fine body of clay and the quality of the brick manufactured is equal to any made.

Thomas C. Wilson was married February 12, 1885, at Troy, Mo., to Anna R., daughter of H. W. and Georgia (Ritnor) Perkins, natives of this State. To them have been born three children, two of whom died in infancy. Hazel, the daughter now living, was born March 24, 1888. Mrs.

Wilson is a member in excellent standing of the Presbyterian Church, in the work of which she takes an active part.

Our subject is a Republican in politics and in 1888 was alternate delegate to the Chicago convention and also represented his district in the National Convention which met at Minneapolis in 1892. He is a member of the Phi Kappa Psi Society, in which he takes great interest.

DAVID A. BALL resides in the City of Louisiana and is among the prominent members of the legal profession in Missouri. He was born June 18, 1851, in Lincoln County, Mo., on a farm where he remained until 1870, when he went to Louisiana to attend school. He was educated in the public schools, attending to his studies during the winter and working on the farm the remainder of the time. After he came to Louisiana, when not at school, he worked in the tobacco factory of A. Tinsley & Co.

In 1873 Mr. Ball was licensed to practice law by Judge G. Porter, then judge of the Third Judicial District of Missouri. In 1874 he was elected City Attorney and served one year. He was elected Prosecuting Attorney of Pike County, Mo., in 1878, and served two terms—four years. Mr. Ball made a vigorous and successful prosecutor during his four years of service as Prosecuting Attorney. It is a remarkable fact that he did not have a single indictment quashed, or a case called for trial that he did not answer "ready."

In 1882 Mr. Ball was elected a member of the Democratic State Committee and was one of the executive committee having in charge the management of the State campaign and by which management they succeeded in electing a solid Democratic delegation to Congress from Missouri. In 1884 he was elected to the State Senate from the Eleventh Senatorial District of Missouri, composed of the counties of Audrain, Lin-
